Miller, Marilyn Keep Date Secret

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
NEW YORK (AP)—Marilyn Monroe and Arthur Miller, the newest leap year leapers, kept their wedding date a lovers' secret today. But they let the world know it would be "before July 13" in either Connecticut or New York.

The rumored romance between the blond movie star and the Pulitzer prize-winning dramatist became official yesterday when Miller picked an unusual locale to disclose their wedding plans.

He announced it to reporters during a brief recess in his testimony before the House Committee on Un-American Activities in Washington.

Marilyn, vacationing in New York confirmed the announcement in a terse press statement and later at a news conference in the hallway outside her fashionable apartment.

All TV Writer Has to Do Is Open His Mail

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK (AP)—Did you know that a television columnist need seldom write a column himself. All he has to do is open his morning mail.

These days press agents come with built-in portables. The old handout is a thing of the past and fit only for the wastebasket. Now they offer specially-written, exclusive features on many of them well-done and interesting.

Take a look at today's mail. Item: "Television and radio fans, who have been reeling under an onslaught of singing commercials, haven't heard anything yet. They can now get their favorite jingle any style: hillbilly, blues, calypso and even rock 'n' roll."

Next paragraph: "Principal instigator of this trend is Mark Lawrence, radio-television production director of the Blank, Blank & Blank advertising agency, who describes himself as 'basically a saloon piano player.'"

Now there I cheated. I didn't mention the agency, which I'm pretty darn certain is the client in the case. Persons and programs are always mentionable; agencies and sponsors are unmentionable.

Item: "A secret isn't what it used to be when Daniel Webster first defined it as 'a thing undisclosed or unknown.' For television has given the word a new importance. Nowadays, the family skeletons are dragged from the attic, dusted off and submitted to CBS-TV's 'I've Got a Secret.'"

This one runs to about 1,500 well-chosen words. In fact, it reads like a piece in a fan magazine. In fact, I think I'll send it back to him, let him put a new top on it—and send it to somebody else.

Conflict:
At 8 p. m. eastern daylight time Sunday evening on CBS-TV Ed Sullivan celebrates the eighth anniversary of his weekly show with such guests as Kate Smith, Harry Belafonte, Jack Paar.

At 8 p. m. eastern daylight time Sunday evening Steve Allen begins his new weekly show on NBC-TV with such guests as Kim Novak, Wally Cox, the dancing team of Bambi Linn and Red Alexander.

Next Monday at 8 p. m. eastern daylight time "Producers' Showcase" NBC-TV presents Betty Field in Anita Loos' "Happy Birthday."

The meeting was opened by the group singing, "America." Mrs. White gave the devotional and the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison.

The club will meet next month with Mrs. Dale Tonnemaker with Mrs. Grady Browning as co-hostess.

It's fun to be footloose and fancy free on hot summer days. These slippers, with their washable fabric tops and slim rubber soles are both pretty and comfortable. Ideal for the beach, picnics, vacations and just relaxing, both indoors and out. Inspired by the southwest, this shell (upper left) has glinting gold Indian braid collar, satiny sole and tiny heel. Ballet pump (upper right) has spangle print on poplin fabric; is done in several color combinations. We show it in blueberry with blue tie print. Strapped slipper in wild apple candy stripes (lower left) is done in solid colors of licorice, blueberry and wild apple, too. Straw braid upper is used for shoe with cork wedge heel (lower right) and sling back buckled strap in poplin. This is a good sightseeing shoe for the girl who likes to see the sights on foot.—By GAILE DUGAS, NEA Women's Editor.

Indian Woman to Receive $158,500

SPOKANE, Wash. (UP)—Mrs. Lucille Boyd Gallegos, 30-year-old Indian, is $158,500 richer today but won't be able to collect until she finishes a four-day sentence in the local drunk tank.

Mrs. Gallegos, of Wellpoint, Wash., along with her brother Richard Boyd, 18, will share an unexpected $317,000 to be paid by the Dawn Mining Co., New York, for uranium rights on 458 acres of their tribal reservation.

"I knew we would get quite a sum for leasing the land," she said, "but I never expected it to reach such an amount. I'm so happy. That's why I've been drinking too much and that's why I'm in the tank."

A total of $340,000 will be paid eight members of the Boyd family with the bulk of it going to Mrs. Gallegos and Richard.

Mrs. Gallegos said she planned to pay bills, buy a car and build a home on the reservation with her share of the money. She still has two days to serve.

Bids were to be opened later today on construction of a bridge across the White River. Army engineers declined to make an estimate but the figure was expected to be at least one million dollars.

The Table Rock reservoir is now being built near Branson, Mo. Part of the reservoir is located in northern Arkansas.

Plan Before You Preserve, Is Advise

Plan before you preserve, if you want to serve well-balanced meals to your family. The suggested preservation plan for fruits and fruit juices is 30 quarts per person in the family. To decide the amount for your family, multiply the number in your family by 30 (counting only 1 1/2 amount or 15 quarts for children under 6). Allow a few extra quarts for guests.

From a bushel of good fruit you should be able to get about 18 quarts. You will have much higher quality products if you sort the peaches for ripeness before you start to preserve them. For best results different peach products requires different degrees of ripeness in peaches. Sort the fruit into three groups: soft or over-ripe, ripe, and under-ripe. The over-ripe or soft peaches are good for making peach butter, puree, or sauce. The ripe fruit is suitable for canning or freezing or drying. The under-ripe fruit is ideal for making peach preserves and for pickling.

Below are extension methods recommended for canning, freezing and drying peaches.

Canning

Select firm, smooth tree-ripened peaches, and wash thoroughly. Remove the skins by paring or by dipping the peaches into boiling water for 1 minute, then into cold water to loosen the skins. Remove the seed. Cut peaches into halves or slices. As the peaches are cut, drop them into a salt-vinegar water (2 tablespoons vinegar and 2 tablespoons salt added to a gallon of water). This keeps the peaches from turning dark. Make a syrup, allowing 3 1/2 cups water and 1/2 cup sugar for each quart of peaches. Boil the sugar and water together for 5 minutes. Drain the peaches and precook for 2 to 3 minutes in boiling syrup. Pack hot peaches in to hot sterilized jars. Place them in jars with seed side down in overlapping layers, cover with hot syrup. Leave 1/4 inch headspace. Remove air bubbles. Seal and process in boiling water bath 15 minutes for pints and 20 minutes for quarts.

Drying

One bushel of peaches will make about 7 pounds of dried fruit. Select firm, sound, tree-ripened peaches. Wash carefully. Peel peaches, into halves, quarters, or eighths. Peaches can be kept from darkening while drying by putting them into a solution of 4 tablespoons of salt to a gallon of water for about 10 minutes before drying.

Dry peaches with controlled heat or by sun-drying. When controlled heat or indoor drying is used, start drying at 125 to 130 degrees F. The fruit should feel just warm to the touch. After the fruit has dried for several hours the temperature can be gradually increased to 175 F. then lowered to 150 F. toward the end of the drying.

To sun-dry peaches, cover the trays with screen or thin cloth to protect the fruit from insects. Place the trays in the direct rays of the sun. Take the fruit in every night and during damp weather. Also turn the fruit from time to time. Dry the fruit until it is tough and leathery. Properly dried fruit has an elastic, springy feel, and separates promptly after pressed with the hand.

Heat sun-dried peaches in the oven until hot to the touch for 10 minutes before storing. Store dried peaches in tight containers and keep in a cool, dry place. Inspect them for mould once a month.

Freezing Select peaches that are fully ripe and sound. Wash them in cold water. Peel only small amounts of peaches at one time. Use a dry sugar pack or sugar syrup pack for freezing peaches.

Dry Sugar Pack: Halve, slice or crush peaches, according to the way the fruit will be used. Add one pound of sugar to 3, 4, or 5 pounds of peaches. The proportion of sugar depends upon individual taste. Mix the sugar and the peaches until the sugar is dissolved. Then pack the peaches into moisture-vapor-proof containers. Leave 1/2 inch headspace. Fill only one container at a time, sealing as it is filled. Label with name of the product and date.

Syrup Syrup Pack: Make a Syrup by dissolving 3 to 4 cups of sugar in 4 cups of water. Cool the syrup. Pack halves or sliced peaches into moisture-vapor-proof containers. Cover peaches with a cold syrup. Leave 1 inch headspace. Put a piece of crumpled parchment paper on the fruit to press it down under the syrup when the container is sealed. Fill only one container at a time, sealing each as it is filled. Label with the name of the product and the date.

Place the sealed containers in the freezing compartment of the home freezing unit, or in the cold part of the refrigerator if it is to be taken to the freezer locker plant.

Peaches tend to darken during freezing and thawing. To prevent darkening, ascorbic acid (Vitamin C) or ascorbic acid mixtures are added to the fruit. To use: Allow 1/4 teaspoon ascorbic acid for each quart prepared fruit or 1/2 teaspoon for each quart syrup. Follow the manufacturer's directions for amount of ascorbic acid mixture to use. Dissolve these anti-oxidants in a small amount of water.

In a sugar pack, sprinkle the dissolved mixture over the fruit before adding the sugar.

In a sugar syrup pack, add the dissolved mixture to the cold syrup just before pouring it over the packed fruit.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I have written several short stories which I am told I should get published. The people I have been recommended to charge a fee just to read them. Could they be sent to an editor of a good magazine? If not accepted, I would like to have my stories returned. Do they do this?

Dear E. R.: Magazines will consider your stories and return them if they prove unsuitable. However, you must send a stamped, self-addressed envelope large enough to hold your manuscript. This is most important.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My boy friend and I went together for five months, then broke up. Ever since, he's been coming back for two days or three, then leaving for a month or six weeks. How can I win him back permanently?

Dear Robin: It would be much easier to find a date for the intervals. Perhaps your boy friend has girls on a rotating basis and dates you in turn.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I have a long overseas stretch would be risky enough if you were absolutely sure of your mutual love, and if your trust in him was beyond question. To incur the risk when you aren't at all sure you love the boy, and have practically no trust in him at all, is foolhardy. Your brief acquaintance with him did nothing to establish a relationship between you that would provide a foundation for marriage. I suppose it's horrid of me, but I wonder if Don's sudden desire for marital bonds has anything to do with the fact that they'd shorten his stay overseas.

Keep up your correspondence, if you wish, but don't let him jump from pen pal to husband with no stops between.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Donald is in the Air Force and we met at Christmas. We dated for two months, then he went away and we've corresponded regularly. Out of a clear sky, I received a letter from him one day, asking me to marry him. Perhaps I was foolish, but I accepted right away.

Now that I've had a bit of time to think it over, I'm reconsidering my decision. Sometimes I think I love him; then again I'm certain I don't.

When Donald was home, I know he had several affairs. He was going with a girl, quite steadily, when he met me. He is coming home again this summer, and would like us to marry then. He leaves for the Far East shortly thereafter and will be gone three years if he isn't married, 18 months if he is.

Am I safe in assuming he has changed, will I be sure of my love when I see him, and is it safe to risk such a long separation after we're married?

Dear Carolyn: Marrying a man on the eve of his departure for a long overseas stretch would be risky enough if you were absolutely sure of your mutual love, and if your trust in him was beyond question. To incur the risk when you aren't at all sure you love the boy, and have practically no trust in him at all, is foolhardy.
